Do you know what disability inclusion is?

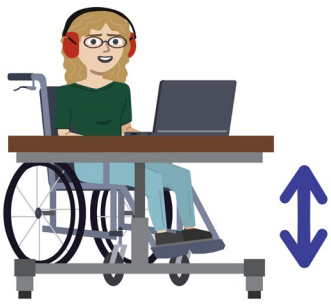

Disability inclusion is about making sure that people living with disability have the same chances and opportunities as everyone else.

This means breaking down barriers that make it hard for them to participate in daily activities, such as work, school, and community life.

This is what disability inclusion looks like in different areas of life:

Education:
Accessible learning and Auslan interpreters.

Employment:
Adaptive workplaces and technology.

Respect:
Recognising different abilities.

Community Access:
Barrier-free environments.

Communication:
Diverse communication methods, such as Easy Read and Augmentative and Alternative Communication (AAC).
